Sundaze & Dazettes

Improved colours, superior performance

Bracteantha (Xerochrysum)

KEY BENEFITS

Flowers of Sundaze and Dazettes are paper-like and are featured either fresh or dried in floral arrangements. They are often used in dried mixed arrangements where they are wired into place to good effect. As a tub plant Sundaze grows quickly and gives of its best. Pots are grown in a sunny position with maybe a little shade during the heat of the day if possible. In garden beds the plants grow quickly flowering almost immediately.

ORIGIN

These Australian Paper Daisies are a native of Australia, they are forms of Bracteantha bracteata. These are now called Xerochrysum bracteantha. They have proven themselves to growers all over the world with their showy, very vibrant colours that shimmer in the wind. They were bred by Dr. Kerry Bunker on our property at Redland Bay. They have been successfully sent to growers to introduce to gardeners around the world. Genetics have advanced so much since the mid 90's until today so that the latest plants of Sundaze we offer today are just so much better than the earliest which have faded into history.

USES

In gardens Sundaze like most well draining garden composts in the beds, an addition of water storing granules and a rewetting agent is useful. A large planted expanse of Sundaze in a garden gives the gardener a rewarding display, borders on garden beds look good. Garden tubs are especially showy. In this situation one can remove the dying flowers which prolongs the flowering period.

CARE

Sundaze are lovers of sunny garden beds and freely draining soils. Watering is important. Keep the soils moist but not over wet. Weekly watering in Summer and monthly watering in the cooler months seems sufficient in our growing beds here in South-East Queensland.

It is important to shear the bushes every few months to remove old flowers and seed heads. Taking some foliage including the shoots on the outside of the bushes induces new growth which quickly comes back into flower.

Fertiliser is kept to a minimum. Excessive levels of fertilizer can result in rank growth and in some cases death. Garden beds should be well prepared with digging in leaf mulch and humus. This is followed by mulching the beds with around 75mm of bark chips then very little other fertilizer is needed for the first 8 to 10 months. A light dressing of a complete plant food could be needed if plants start to yellow and flower size gets smaller.

Spectacular and heavy flowering for most of the year with easy care make Sundaze and Dazettes a great addition to the gardens of Australia.
